THE NEW STYLE MARY POPPINS REALLY PACKS A PUNCH

A knowledge of self defence, the ability to drive at high speed and the ability to get rid of potential kidnappers are accomplishments that should figure on any self-respecting bodyguard's CV – but they are also among the new skills being taught to trainee nannies.

Once it was enough for a nanny to be able to push a pram and settle the kids with a bedtime story, but students at the famous Norland College, Bath, are finding they need a new skill-set to prepare them for the 21st-century childcare environment. The £36,000, three-year BA Honours degree course features Tae Kwon Do lessons as well as driving instruction on a skid pan so the nannies will be able to safely escape pursuing photographers.

Famous for the brown uniform, felt hat and white gloves worn by graduates, Norland College has been training since 1892. Many go on to work for celebrities and other high profile families.

Lecturer Claire Burgess believes founder Emily Ward would approve. She says: 'When Emily set up Norland, it was forward-thinking, and I think she'd love the idea we're now moving it even more forward.' And so would Mary Poppins.

SLUMDOG MAKES TOP 50

In any list of great films, it is the ones left out that cause excitement. So when film critic Barry Norman last month published his top 49 British films and left it to Radio Times readers to pick the 50th, more than 3,000 piled in with over 500 suggestions.

And one stood out as clear favourite – Slumdog Millionaire – which Mr Norman claims he took off his original list. The film, which won eight Oscars and seven Baftas, is the story of a Mumbai teenager winning the Indian version of Who Wants To Be A Millionaire?

Mr Norman said: "When I was asked to do the list, Slumdog Millionaire was on there. I excluded it partly out of curiosity to see what kind of reaction it might get. Slumdog doesn't have a phoney feel-good ending, but there is a sense of hope which runs throughout the film, which is great."

HOW ROBERT REDFORD'S FAMILY ARE CHANGING OUR THINKING ON DYSLEXIA

On the face of it, Dylan Redford has everything going for him – he is a handsome, intelligent and artistic 22-year-old who happens to be the grandson of Robert Redford, world-famous actor and director. But he is also severely dyslexic and, at the age of 10, could barely read or write.

At school in Marin County, California, he found it impossible to use the lockers. The combination of remembering a sequence of numbers and then twisting the padlock dial in the right direction proved difficult to master. "I had to ask my friends to do it for me," says Dylan.

Dylan's experiences with dyslexia are depicted in a new documentary, The Big Picture, directed by Dylan's father, James. After watching his "intellectually curious son" struggle with dyslexia throughout much of his childhood, James Redford, the eldest surviving child of Robert, says his ambition was simple. He wanted "to make the movie I wish my family could have seen".

The Big Picture, which is to be released in the UK later this month after getting excellent reviews in the US, follows the stories of several dyslexics of different ages, including Dylan, and examines how people with the condition cope from a young age right through adulthood.

Among the interviewees are prominent lawyers, bankers and chief executives. Richard Branson, the founder of Virgin Group, talks candidly on camera about his own dyslexia, admitting that someone once had to explain to him the difference between "gross" and "net" profit after a board meeting.

Dyslexia is a persistent condition consisting of a combination of abilities and difficulties. According to the Dyslexia Research Trust it is the most common cause of childhood loss of confidence, sometimes leading to frustration and depression. Yet the condition is still shrouded in mystery. When Dylan was a child, most people still assumed it was a "made-up" illness that children could grow out of.

The Big Picture explores some recent scientific research around dyslexia which has used brain imaging to demonstrate that shrinkage in the part of brain that processes word sounds and language could be one of the condition's contributory factors.

NO MORE OF THIS

After 14 years teaching in prison, Alan Smith explains why he has given it up

"You OK? " said Casey.

"Yeah, fine. I'm all right," I said, but I wasn't. I knew that I had lost the stomach for the whole damned business. In 14 years, I had never excluded anyone, no matter how difficult they were. But now, my confidence had gone and I wanted to get under the duvet and stay there. Casey gave me a hug: "Retire, man. You don't need all this."

I suppose it had all been creeping up on me for a while. What I had to face up to was that I was becoming increasingly indifferent. I had always tried to avoid this. Failure begins with indifference. There were moments now, more and more of them, when I didn't care about the things that happened, who they happened to.

And so it was time to go. I couldn't just walk away. I offered the men a deal. I would stay as long as they did. Sue, the education manager, finally agreed to let the class run down, no more new faces.

By that time there were only four members in the group and, out of the blue, there was a run of golden, other-worldly mornings when we read Chaucer. Chaucer. They couldn't get enough of the Canterbury Tales, that lovely run of characters. The men's enthusiasm reassured me that I hadn't wasted my time. What, after all, does education offer to people if not a greater sense of being human? When we don't know about history and art and society we are adrift, lost. Many of the men I taught were ignorant of just about everything, and as grown men they felt this keenly. Education was a relief, a route to self-respect.

Then three of the men were released and it was just me and Casey. We decided to do quantum physics, and for a few months we followed a course of lectures on CD. I found it hard going, but in fact his maths turned out to be better than mine and he helped me to understand things. I know that I tried his patience, making him go over things three or four times, but he was a good teacher.

One afternoon, Sue rang me up. "Casey was released yesterday." And I was finished.

ESCALATOR ETIQUETTE: THE DOS AND DON'TS

Michael Bloomberg, Mayor of New York, has said that (0) _____. Good exercise, yes, but some cities discourage it. And there's one thing obstructing walkers – people who stand.

But Bloomberg is still in a minority of escalator users around the world. In London, about 25% of people on the Tube walk on the escalators and in Shanghai only about 3%, according to a study. And in some countries, (22) _____. On the Toronto subway system, signs that encouraged people to walk on the left were removed at the recommendation of safety experts.

Most escalators across the world that (23) _____ follow the "walk on the left" custom, to speed up the flow. One of the exceptions is Australia, where (24) _____. One thing, though, unites all the cities that do have a system - there's conflict when people obstruct the walking lane.

"Able-bodied people standing on the downward escalator are in effect (25) _____," says Hamilton Nolan, who writes for The New Yorker and regularly uses the subway. "It's not open war," he adds, "it's a war waged in the privacy of the enraged minds of walkers who are forced to stand impatiently behind as (26) _____."

But people who stand defend themselves by (27) _____, because the escalator is doing the work for them. There are plenty of examples online of frustrated commuters venting their anger about what they regard as anti-social behaviour. Common complaints include people standing on the wrong side, not leaving enough space between standers, (28) _____ and blocking the way with luggage.

In Toronto, that tension has been defused since the signs telling people to walk on the left were removed, says commuter Tom Robertson. "You can tell some people get a little annoyed when they are (29) _____ but I've never seen anyone say anything about it. I think many people have forgotten about the signs."

In fact, accidents and fatalities on escalators are rare. In Beijing, one person died and dozens were injured in 2011 when (30) _____ and threw them off balance. Other cases have involved people being entrapped by clothes, but deaths are very rare.

Anyway, if you really want to avoid escalators, you should move to Wyoming. The US state has only two escalators, both in a bank.

FROZEN TREASURE FOUND IN THE FRENCH ALPS

A treasure of precious jewels has been found (0) _____ a young alpinist on the ice caps of Mont Blanc, (11) _____ it was probably lost decades ago among the wreckage of a crashed airliner.

Local police chief Sylvain Merly confirmed that about a hundred small precious stones were found in a metallic box in the ice caps known (12) _____ Bossons. Merly said the stones were separated in plastic bags that were stamped "Made in India." A local jeweler estimates the treasure to (13) _____ worth around $250,000. The diamonds, emeralds, sapphires and rubies are believed (14) _____ have come from one of two Air India planes (15) _____ crashed in the French Alps in 1950 and 1966.

The young male climber who stumbled across the lost treasure wishes to (16) _____ anonymous. French authorities are contacting (17) _____ Indian counterparts to trace the owners of the jewels. (18) _____ someone claims the gems, they will be returned to the young mountaineer.

Merly said that as the ice caps change, debris from the plane crashes rises to the surface periodically. Climbers have encountered all manner of artefacts including newspapers, a jet engine and human remains (19) _____ the years. In 2012, a bag of Indian diplomatic mail marked "ministry of external affairs" (20) _____ discovered.

Arnaud Christmann, another alpinist familiar (21) _____ the area, said he feared the discovery would trigger "a gold rush" to the area. He asked "for some respect (22) _____ the crash victims" and regretted the "spirit of treasure hunters" that motivated some mountain climbers.

THE TEA BAG

The purpose of the tea bag is (0) _____ in the belief that for tea to taste its best, the leaves (23) _____ to be removed from the hot water at the end of a specific brewing period. The earliest examples of removable infusing devices for holding tea (24) _____ metal tea eggs and tea balls.

Needless (25) _____, it was in America, with its love of labour-saving devices, that tea bags were first developed. In 1908, Thomas Sullivan, a New York tea merchant, started to send samples of tea to his customers in small silken bags. Some assumed that these were (26) _____ to be used in the same way as the metal infusers, by putting the entire bag into the pot, rather than (27) _____ out the contents. It was thus (28) _____ accident that the tea bag was born! During the 1920s tea bags were developed for commercial production, and they grew in popularity in the USA.

(29) _____ Americans took to tea bags with enthusiasm, the British were naturally cautious about such a radical change in their tea-making methods. The material shortages of World War Two also delayed the mass adoption of tea bags in Britain, and it was not until the 1950s that they really (30) _____ off. The 1950s were a time when all sorts of household gadgets (31) _____ promoted as eliminating tedious household chores. Tea bags gained popularity (32) _____ they removed the need to empty out the used tea leaves from the pot. In the early 1960s, tea bags made up less than 3 per cent of the British market but by 2007 this had increased to 96 per cent.

Welcome to the Listening component of the Matura Examination.

The listening material and the instructions are recorded on the CD, and the tasks and instructions are printed in your test booklet.

- Then we will play the recording in one piece.
- After another short silent period we will play the recording for the second time, but now in shorter sections and with breaks between the sections in order to give you enough time to write down your answers.

Please note that the first item in each task (marked with a tick [✓]) is always an example.

Task A

You are spending a year in London studying at university and you would like to have a part time job. One of your friends sent you the following advertisement:

JOB VACANCIES

The Sherlock Holmes Museum
221b Baker Street London NW1 6XE

The Sherlock Holmes Museum is a popular London attraction with an international clientele from all walks of life who share a common interest in the "Life and Times of Sherlock Holmes".

Applicants should have an interest in the late Victorian period, be out-going and friendly and must speak good English. You will be required to meet and greet people at the house (mainly overseas tourists) and to be in attendance to answer any queries. If you have creative ideas, so much the better!

Often groups of 30 or more young people visit the Museum, so you will need to be able to organise activities for them. We also have a large heritage gift shop on the ground floor where you will be needed to assist with selling memorabilia to Museum visitors, and we have a library where visitors can put their feet up and read a book (silence please!).

A costume consisting of a long blue dress and white apron, in keeping with the Victorian period, is provided to our younger female employees, and men wear a waistcoat and cravat.

It's a fun and varied job requiring charisma and sometimes diplomacy!

There is the option to work part-time or full-time. The starting pay is £80.00 per day.

Please apply by email to: museum@sherlock-holmes.co.uk

(www.sherlock-holmes.co.uk)

Write an email of 120-150 words to the museum in which you apply for the job. Include the following:

- say why you are interested in the job,
  - choose two activities described in the advert which you think you would be good at and say why,
  - specify how many days a week (and which days) you would like to work.

Begin like this:

Dear Sir / Madam.

Task B

You received the following email from your American friend Eric:

You know how difficult it was for me when we moved to New York and I had to change schools but recently I began to hang out with these guys and they asked me to join their group on Facebook. I felt so good about it, and to be sure, it was a lot of fun at first. But yesterday I found someone had posted a photo of a girl in our class and altered it with Photoshop. The image made it look like she was the only girl at a party of boys, holding a bottle, and dancing on the table. I hardly know the girl, and I know it's a private online group and anything posted there is supposedly for the members' eyes only but the photo made me feel guilty. Can you think of anything I could do? Say something to the other guys and risk looking like a weirdo? Drop out of the group and forget about it all? That would mean the photo stayed out there and I would just be ignoring the problem. I feel really stuck. What, if anything, should I do?

(www.questia.com)

Write an email of 200-250 words to Eric in which you

- give your opinion about what the other boys have done,
- describe a similar case you've heard of,
- give Eric some advice about what to do in this situation.

Begin your email like this:

Hello Eric,
